

The "donation" of $325,000 worth of air-time to Republican candidates in several areas in California by Pappas Tele-casting is an abuse of their free access to the public airwaves. The public interest is not served when only one side of an issue or a candidacy is presented, and the use of the public airwaves requires the service of public interest. As guardians of the public trust in this matter, the FCC has a duty to intervene.